You Know What to Say. Now Practise Saying It.

Thirty days of small, supported speaking practice in a pod of 10 people with a facilitator who keeps the room encouraging. Start at a level that suits you, or simply watch first.

₦20,000 one-time · Only 50 places · Enrolment closes 21 November 2026 · Core programme starts 28 November 2026

Nobody is ever forced to speak before they are ready.

The Reality Check

Knowing what to say is not the same as feeling ready to say it.

You have an answer, an opinion, or a story to share. Your heart speeds up, you hold back, and someone else speaks first. Or your mind goes blank when you are asked to introduce yourself. Or you rehearse a sentence until the moment has passed.

It happens in meetings, classes, group chats, interviews, community gatherings and family events. It says nothing about your worth. It is common, and it is workable.

How Most People Stay Stuck

The old approach

- Watching videos and reading tips that do not change how it feels when attention turns to you
- Waiting for the fear to vanish before speaking
- Avoiding it, which brings relief now but makes the next time harder

The practice approach

- Short daily reps: 60-90 seconds, manageable even on a busy day
- A small pod of 10: familiar faces, with people working on the same challenge
- A facilitator: keeps the room kind and the steps manageable
- Gradual progress: you build up at your own pace, and you can pass on any activity

How the 30 Days Work

Week before: Warm-up (22-27 November). Once you enrol, you join the community straight away. Get comfortable with Telegram, meet your pod, learn the room rules, and take part in low-pressure activities, or just listen.

Step 1: Join your pod. You are placed in a pod of about 10 at a level that suits you, with a facilitator. Take your starting seat, speaking or watching.

Step 2: Daily micro-reps. Each day, one short prompt of 60-90 seconds. Say something out loud, then notice it went better than you feared. Twice a week, your pod meets live for a 30-minute session.

Step 3: Weekend speaking room. Each weekend, the wider community comes together for warm-ups, small-group challenges, spontaneous speaking and reflection. Step into larger groups only when you feel ready.

Every step is optional and paced for you.

Who It's For

This is for you if:

- You often know what you want to say but find it hard when others are listening
- You avoid meetings, group discussions, introductions, networking, interviews, or unexpected questions
- You want a supportive place to practise, not a critical one
- You are willing to take small steps, even awkward ones

You do not need to be good at speaking, and you do not need to feel confident first. That is what you are here to build.

An Honest Note: What This Isn't

Not a presentation-skills course, not speechwriting, and not therapy. Facilitators are not clinicians, so if anxiety is severely affecting your daily life, please speak to a qualified professional. We also do not promise your nerves will disappear. The goal is to feel more comfortable and to stop letting nerves make the decision for you.

Your Investment

₦20,000. One payment. Everything above included.

The real question is not whether ₦20,000 is a lot. It is what another year of staying quiet costs you: the meeting contribution you did not make, or the interview answer that did not come out the way you meant.

50 places · 5 pods of 10 · Enrolment closes 21 November 2026

The cap is not a marketing trick. Each pod has its own facilitator, and adding more people would weaken what makes the programme work.

FAQ

What if I am too shy to speak? Then this is built for you. Your first seat can be an observing seat, and you join in when you are ready.

What if I do not want to be on camera? There is an audio-only option.

How much time do I need? A daily rep of about 5-10 minutes, two 30-minute pod sessions, and the weekend session each week. [Confirm session days and times.]

What if I miss a session? The 24-hour catch-up pack helps you catch up.

What if I do not improve? Eligible members who take part and need more time can receive up to two additional weeks of guided support at no extra cost.

Why pay when free videos exist? Free videos cannot sit in a room with you while you try it. You get live practice, a pod, a facilitator, a progress log, five bonuses and three months of alumni access.

Final Call

Silence feels safer, but it will not change anything on its own.

What changes it is practice: small, repeated, supported, and at your pace.

Observe first if you want to. Nobody will make you speak before you are ready.

Changes Made

- Removed all "free trial," "₦0" and "no payment" language, and the invented ₦150,000 value stack.
- The programme is now the 30-day sprint at ₦20,000, with the price repeated beside every CTA.
- The warm-up is now one week, and the dates are rebuilt around it.
- Kept the broad audience and the strongest trust builders (observe-first, audio-only, the "what this isn't" note), and cut roughly two thirds of the SpeakUp Lab length.

Please Confirm

1. Dates: if enrolment closes Saturday 21 Nov, the warm-up is set at 22-27 Nov and the core start at 28 Nov, one week after close. If the close date moves, every instance needs updating.

2. Price: ₦20,000 is the founding price from the SpeakUp Lab copy. Is that still right?
3. Session structure: assumed daily micro-reps, two 30-minute weekday pod sessions, and a weekend session across the 30 days. The "16 hours" claim was left out because 30 days does not divide neatly into four weeks. What is the real live-hours total?
4. Guarantee and alumni access: both kept from the SpeakUp Lab copy. Do they still apply?
5. Telegram vs WhatsApp: the form sends people to WhatsApp, but sessions run on Telegram. Pick one story or explain both.
6. Payment and refunds: the form needs a payment method, and a one-line refund or deferral policy is advisable.
7. Social proof: still missing. Even two testimonials or a facilitator bio would help.
